0.0 EXECUTIVE SUMMARY	2
The market across eight countries was worth approximately €2.81 billion in 2008.....	2
... with cross-selling rates generally highest in the UK and weakest in Portugal.....	3
Mobile telephone insurance accounts for the largest single share of the total market value	3
Not all manufacturers run extended warranty and insurance schemes on a purely captive basis... ..	3
... although they are generally more likely to do so than retailers and mobile network operators.....	3
Captive programs may generate opportunities in insurance, reinsurance or administration	4
A number of factors will assist continuing growth in the extended warranty and insurance sector.....	4
... including the launch of new schemes, improved cross-selling and product innovation.....	4
... although the dynamics of the market are complicated by a range of factors... ..	5
... such as the growing use of the Internet as a sales channel for mobile consumer products	5
Bundling with banking products could also threaten stand-alone sales in France and the UK.....	5
Opportunities will arise for both international competitors and nationally focused protagonists	6
1.0 INTRODUCTION	8
Rationale	8
Most published data focuses disproportionately on the underlying mobile products themselves.....	8
... ignoring the fact that manufacturers and distributors can make large profits from related services	8
Consumers are increasingly at large with high value mobile devices in their pockets... ..	8
... but evolving distribution channels both favour and impede extended warranties and insurance ...	8
