2.0 STRATEGIES FOR SUCCESS	21
Introduction	20
Why consider affinity and partnership marketing?	20
Affinity and partnership marketing is not a new concept	20
Proprietary distribution channels present limited organic growth potential	21
Not all schemes work but some have been hugely successful	21
Transient relationships mean that incumbents can sometimes be unseated	21
What makes for a successful relationship?	22
Successful affinity and partnership marketing schemes must create three sets of winners	22
All parties need to benefit but the customer remains king	23
Judicious partner selection is a prerequisite for establishing effective schemes	24
Brand or ideological fit can be as important as more concrete selection criteria	25
Strategies for effective affinity and partnership marketing	25
Optimum results will be achievable only if all elements of the marketing mix are attended to	25
Affinity and partnership marketing: the way ahead	26
Financial institutions must emerge from their product silos to create more exciting packages	26
Injecting some fun into financial services will stimulate affinity marketing schemes	28
The future prospects for affinity and partnership marketing should be bright	30
